"TRIPS ACROSS" BY A GUNNER IN SIEGE BATT.

Interesting Detailed Account of Voyage.
BY MCGILL MAN.

Police Duty at Sea Exciting—No
Submarines—Seamen's Life
Monotonous.

Insofar as is possible the "Daily" will endeavour to run a series of articles giving the experiences of the McGill Siege Artillery Draft, which left Montreal, for further training, on June 19th last, under the command of Captain Sir Stopford Brunton.

The task of recruiting set before Captain Brunton and his officers, was probably the easiest that any McGill unit has experienced. The O. C. was kind enough to say that this was due very largely to their most comfortable barracks, the Union. It would be unjust to say they were the best unit that has represented McGill, but one is bound to say that they were just as fine a body of men as any unit that had preceded them. The battery were up early on the morning of June 19th, and were paraded to the Campus at 8.30 a.m., where they stood easy until they marched to the station at 11 a.m. During this time their friends and relations were allowed to mingle freely with the ranks, and this method of allowing the good-byes to be said, was a great saving of confusion in the barracks. Now follows an account of the trip across, as written by one of the members of the battery.

We pulled into H— at 9 a.m. on the 22nd, and boarded ship at 11.30 a.m., some ship, too. It was built for the Netherlands by England, but was not completed till after war broke out, so it was turned into a troopship, supposed to be the largest afloat. There are six thousand troops aboard. We have second class cabins, four men to a cabin, one in each bunk, all rigged up with sheets, pillow cases and regular beds. The rest of the bunch sleep in hammocks. The food is great. We had dinner at 1.30 p.m., loafed around all afternoon and had supper at 6 p.m. There are three bath-tubs lying in the harbour, two English and one French, also a torpedo boat destroyer. I guess it is our conveyer.

June 23rd, 1917.—We pulled out of H— at 11.30 this morning, but anchored in mid stream, and do not expect to move until about 5 a.m. tomorrow. I have absolutely no fear of being seasick, when I look at this great big ship. The rest of the troops are kind of sore at us getting beds, and they having to sleep in hammocks. The bunch are getting brown as berries, and look the picture of health. The sea air makes one very sleepy, all we have to do is eat, sleep and take sun baths. At 9 p.m. we had a kind of a sing song, one of the fellows has a fiddle, so we have a great old time on deck. I have taken a few pictures of the boys, but I find out that there is a penalty of five years or a fine of $1,000, so I guess I'll quit.

June 24th, 1917.—Well, we expected to wake up this morning and find ourselves in the middle of the ocean, but we are still in the same place. Today being Sunday, we were supposed to go to Church, but they inoculated us instead. That makes the third and last time. It is raining to-day, but as there is plenty of shelter, we do not mind it. Can you picture me washing my own clothes? They are certainly giving us fine grub, boiled eggs for breakfast, roasts, potatoes and pudding for dinner, and a light supper. It is the easiest thing in the world to get lost on this boat, and it is not at all an uncommon sight for a fellow to wander into the dining room half an hour late, and explain that he has been wandering around looking for the mess room.

June 25th, 1917.—We were up at 6 a.m. this morning, and were kind of disappointed to find ourselves still in the same old place, but as we were allotted our ship space, and had life belts issued, it looks promising. We had a few boxing bouts this afternoon. 6 p.m. we were told to carry our life belts, and the general rumour is that we will put out about 8 p.m. Our convey consists of two cruisers. At exactly 7.45 p.m. one of the cruisers pulled out, and everybody was on deck to see the sights, and, believe me, it was some sight. We followed the cruiser, and after us came another boat, then the other cruiser, so you can see we are well protected. The boys are all trying to get used to the roll of the boat.

June 26th, 1917.—We are about three hundred miles at sea, pretty slow going, I believe, but should land in about ten days. This morning they picked out thirty of the biggest men in the battery, and put us on special police duty. The clink is already half full; believe me, we are some policemen. We are on duty four hours and off eight, so that is not too bad. We have nothing else to do, but the rest of the bunch are drilling hard. No sea sickness yet, so hope there will not be any. ARTS '18 MAN DIED VALIANTLY AT POST

Officer Highly Praises Brave
Conduct of Former McGill
Man.

Signaller Douglas Sellar, Arts '18, met his death on August 15, 1917, while in discharge of his duty. Sellar entered McGill with the class of '18, but after completing one year in Arts he went into munition work. However, even from the outbreak of war Douglas had a burning desire to go overseas, so that it was not strange that he soon gave up munitions and attempted to enlist. Before finally signing up with the 35th Battery, C. F. A., he was on several occasions rejected as physically unfit. Sellar was a clever student, and his quiet geniality gained him many friends at McGill. Signaller Sellar was the only son of the Rev. Johnson Sellar, of Richmond, Que.

The following extract from a letter written by Douglas' pal, Duart McLean, on August 21, six days after Douglas' death, gives a little information regarding the way in which Douglas was killed.

"His death was fortunately instantaneous, and consequently painless. He was shot through the heart or abdomen while out repairing the line in the old German front line, shortly after reaching the first objective. Taking advantage of a quiet time just as it was getting dark, we were able to get his body over 'No Man's Land' and back to the battery two nights ago. His funeral was held yesterday from the wagon lines to the British cemetery at Noeux Les Mines, about 25 men from the Battery attending. His grave is No. 16, row J."

The following letter, which the Rev. Johnson Sellar received from Lieut. K. B. Robertson, commanding the section with which Douglas Sellar was connected, shows the fine appreciation officers and men had for the gallant Richmond boy.

France, Aug. 18, 1917.
Dear Mr. Sellar,—It was with the very deepest sorrow that I was informed of your brave son Douglas' death, and as his section commander, I wish to try and express my feelings in this regard.

In expressing my deepest sympathies both to you and all your family, I am sure I can also add the sympathies of every single man in the battery. Your son was extremely popular and was greatly respected, having won the respect of both officers and men by his quiet, gentlemanly and brave conduct.

He was ever in the discharge of all duties, a diligent and conscientious worker, never complaining under the most trying circumstances and never showing the slightest sign of fear amid the greatest danger. He was one of our very best signallers, if not the very best.

I was not with your son, nor even near him when he was killed. I was unfortunately back in charge of the wagon lines, and therefore I can't give you any details of his death. His grave is, I believe, very near where he fell, which was then "No Man's Land." (Continued on Page 4.)

SUCCESSFUL EXCURSION OF GEOLOGISTS

Party of 24 Visited Mile End Quarries.

INTERESTING INVESTIGATION.

Dr. Bancroft Lectures and Tells of Great Antiquity of Rock Formation.

The party, two dozen strong, assembled as arranged, at the corner of De Fleurmont St. and St. Denis St. Going from there to the Mile End quarries they went into action at once, armed with the formidable weapon, which is peculiar to geological pursuits.

The threatened rain did not materialize, and the low temperature only served to give the party some snap, which was quite evident when one noticed Dr. Bancroft, the leader of the expedition, setting the pace for a run across the quarry.

When the party reached the edge, and had taken up a position of advantage overlooking the quarries, they were treated to a discourse, in which the lecturer emphasized the great antiquity of the beds of limestone, which formed the walls of the quarries. These beds were laid down at a time anterior to the appearance of animal life on our planet. Life was entirely confined to the sea, said the lecturer, and was invertebrate. He then went on to describe the different kinds of curious creatures, who passed their lives in shells. Some grew to considerable length, as, for instance, the "orthoceras," of which specimens are found sometimes fifteen feet in length. Next, in order, came the "Trilobites," under which head came the "Anaphous," with its eight segments, and the "Callymene," with its twelve segments. The "Trematoceras," with its three bumps, was also described.

The lecturer then turned to the "Brachiopodes," including the Strophomena, with its hard, flat shell. This formation is supposed to have served to protect it against its aggressive neighbours, the devil-fish. The curious tongue-shaped lingula was also referred to.

Brief reference was made to a now extinct species of coral called the Monticulipora, which was commencing its development at this time.

Most interesting of all touched upon by the lecturer was the Chrinoid, or stone-illy. These animals, which grew in veritable gardens, bore a remarkable resemblance to lilies, with their petals and stalks, (which were segmented), and with its roots by which it fastened itself to the ocean floor.

In conclusion the lecturer called attention to the numerous dykes visible on the wall and floor of the quarries, and also went briefly into the origin of Mount Royal.

The party then dispersed, and bringing their hammers into play, discovered the remains of many of the creatures referred to. Good specimens of the Chrinoids were found, and the Strophomena were quite abundant.

At 11.30 the excursionists turned their steps homeward.

These Geological excursions are well worth the time which they take up, and the whole party voted that the study of Geology was certainly most interesting and attractive, when one dipped into its mysteries, as found beneath our feet.

POLO TEAM HELD PRACTICE.

The second polo practice of the year was held on Saturday afternoon at the Y.M.C.A. baths, to even smaller numbers than was the first practice, for only five men were out. Nevertheless, an excellent practice was held. Among the men out were Shotwell, Henderson, Walters, Lally and MacGregor. It is likely that the first game in which McGill plays this season will be with the Montreal Swimming Club, on Tuesday, the 16th, from whom McGill has a very good chance to capture the honors.

Quinlan, Blinmore and the men whose names appear above are asked to turn out at the next practice, the date of which will appear in the "Daily" within the next few days.

T. P. MacGREGOR,
Manager.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS.

The University of Pennsylvania expects to produce a championship eleven for the coming football season. No less than one hundred and ten students turned out at the first practice under Coach Folwell. The latter has already started the weeding out process, and expects to have the team picked in the very near future.

LOOK UP THE LIBRARY.

Wise is the student who begins his reading early in the term. At this season, when there are so many distracting influences about, and when very few men have even begun to get settled for the work of the session, the industrious ones have their chance. The library is almost deserted, and the books of reference are all to be found in their places. Instead of receiving the annoying answer to his question, "The book is in use just now," the seeker after knowledge may choose at will from among the readings prescribed for his course.

As for the first year man, it is not likely that he even enters the library for some days to come, let alone work there. The reference shelves are likely to be the last place visited in his wanderings about the college. In this connection it is of interest to read the following from the "Mississippiian"; it will be noted that the system of cataloguing the books is almost precisely the same as that followed at McGill.

The first duty of the new student is to become acquainted with the Library, the vital center of the intellectual life of the University. Of course, he will be sent to the Library in a few weeks by his various instructors; but it is much better to investigate for himself and to be able to find material when assigned.

Our Library is badly constructed in one important respect, that the reading public cannot get readily to the shelves. Most modern libraries have the open shelf system, which allows the reader to wander at will among the books. This defect in our own Library has been partially corrected by placing in the open Reference Room the most important encyclopaedias, dictionaries, and other works of reference. In the room opposite are placed the current newspapers and magazines.

The main collection, however, is kept in the rear of the Librarian's delivery desk. Since the student cannot get easily to the books, it is necessary for him to study carefully the card catalogue just in front of the desk. Every book is catalogued by author, subject, and in most cases by title. The cards are arranged in alphabetical order, and the reader has merely to look through the drawers as through a dictionary to find the desired book. For instance, in the drawer marked "S" he will find cards for the works of Sir Walter Scott. Looking through these cards, arranged in alphabetical order, he can find Ivanhoe. Thus if either the title or the author is known, the book can easily be found.

In addition the cards are arranged according to subject. For instance, if the reader desires to know what books relating to chemistry are in the Library, he has only to look in the drawer marked "C" until he finds "Chemistry." He will then find in alphabetical order all the books relating to that subject. The same thing is true of other subjects—Geology, Mathematics, Music, Art, Economics, Latin, Greek, Physics, Mississippi History or any others which are represented by books in the Library.

The reader can then write on a slip provided by the Librarian the number written in the upper left-hand corner of the card, together with the author and title of the book. The Librarian will then find the book for him. The number in the left-hand corner simply indicates the position of the book on the shelves.

My advice to the new student and the old student who has not formed the library habit, is to go to the library just as soon as possible. See what newspapers and magazines are in the Reading Room and decide just which of them you wish to read regularly. Look at the books in the Reference Room, and be able to find them when they are assigned to you by your instructors. Look through the card catalogue, and be sure that you can find any book you want. Introduce yourself to the Librarian; and if you are very much interested, she will no doubt take you through the stocks and explain to you all that you want to know. Then take out some books and start to work.

The Library is to be your chief place of work during your college career, and one of your places for recreation. Learn to use it at once, and you will find your work easier and your recreation more enjoyable.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

Hardly had our appeal on Friday last seen the evening of its first day, when a splendid article was sent to us by Miss E. Hurlbatt, M.A., T.C.D., Warden of the Royal Victoria College.

Coming from such a pen as Miss Hurlbatt's, the "foreword" was excellent, not only as a valuable word to the women students, but as a literary contribution.

What the "Daily" appreciates most, however, is the spirit which prompted the writer, in the midst of her many duties and responsibilities, to respond to our appeal of last Friday. May we hope that other members of the Professoriate will follow this encouraging example.

RETURNED MEN IN LAW SCHOOL.

TORONTO.—The Ontario law school has re-opened with a total roll of 120 students, as compared with one of 300 of "Do ye ken John Peel?" ran as in attendance, 15 are young women, and two are soldiers back from the front. There are six female students in the first year, five in the second, and four in the third. The two veterans from overseas are W. G. Kerr, of the second year, and T. D. Leonard, of the third year.

BEFORE KEMP TOOK CHARGE.

One of the songs that the Canadians used to sing at the front, to the tune or so before the war. Of the 120 now follows:

"Do ye ken Sam Hughes?
He's the enemy of booze;
He's the great champion
Of the dry canteen.
So we'll all go to bed,
For the place is dead,
And we won't have a head
In the morning."

LONDON GAZETTE TELLS OF DEEDS FOR WHICH McGILL GRADUATES HAVE BEEN AWARDED M.C.

Capt J.E. Affleck, Med. '16, "Did not Hesitate to Risk his Life" in Order to Succor Wounded Officer — Military Cross for Major D. R. Charleson, Sci. '14 — McGill man at Head of Engineers' Training Depot — Many Graduates are Married

Major D. R. Charleson, M.C.

Stewart Lyon, the correspondent at the front of the Canadian Press, in a despatch published a few days ago, states that the Military Cross has been awarded to Acting Major Donald Richard Charleson, Sci. '14, of a British Columbia Battalion, for conspicuous gallantry during the battle of Lens. Major Charleson is a Vancouver man, who enlisted soon after the outbreak of war in the 47th Overseas Battalion, and who has participated in a great deal of fighting. He has risen in rank from lieutenant to major.

Flight Commander Fisher.

According to a private cablegram received by his mother, Mrs. Roswell Fisher, Montreal, Flight Commander Philip S. Fisher, D.S.C., Arts '16, of the Royal Naval Air Service, was on September 24 seriously wounded in the thigh and knee, and is now a patient at the Alexandra Hospital, Dunkirk. Flight Commander Fisher, who was last summer awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, has been overseas since the fall of 1915, when he left his studies in Arts to volunteer his services. He was taking a double course in Arts and Science, and was awarded his degree in Arts in 1916. He served on the executive of the Arts Undergraduate Society, and of the Literary and Debating Society.

Why They Were Decorated.

The London Gazette tells of the gallantry of several graduates as follows: Bar to Military Cross.—Capt. Samuel James Mathewson, M.C., Sci. '15, Inf. —During a raid upon enemy trenches he directed the advance of two companies with the utmost skill and courage, and improvised and led a bombing party, with which he cleared a large section of trench which was holding up our advance. He kept in touch with the troops on his flanks, and, later, displayed exceptional coolness and leadership in conducting the withdrawal, bringing with him all his wounded and three enemy machine-guns. (M.C., gazetted Nov. 14, 1916).

Military Cross.—Capt. John Ernest Affleck, Med. '16, A.M.C.—He crawled along a shallow and much exposed trench to rescue a very severely wounded officer, whose life depended upon an immediate operation. With the assistance of a stretcher bearer he managed to get the wounded man out on a blanket to a place where he could be evacuated. The task was a very slow and dangerous one, by reason of their being completely exposed to enemy snipers, but Capt. Affleck did not hesitate to risk his life in order to do all that was humanly possible for this wounded officer.

Lt. Henry Bruce Chown, Arts '14, Field Artillery.—For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as P.O.O. He went forward with the first wave of an attack and continued to send back most accurate and valuable information and instructions to his battery for fifteen hours at a stretch, which enabled hostile artillery to be very effectively dealt with. He displayed great coolness and skill as well as remarkable powers of endurance.

Lt. William Walseley Raymond, Sci. '12, Engineers.—Accompanied by another officer, he made a personal and thorough investigation of a town under shell fire so intense that they thought it advisable to dispense with their party of eight men, and proceeded by themselves. No part of the town was left unvisited, and this although the conditions were trying in the extreme. The gallantry and coolness of this officer and his comrade were beyond all praise. He has also done very fine work in laying mines, despite very active opposition from the enemy.

Major T. V. Anderson, Sci. '01, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Canadian Engineers, and has been placed in command of the Canadian Engineers' Training Depot. Lieut.-Colonel Anderson has been three times mentioned in despatches and has been wounded.

Lieut. H. O. Barnaby, Sci. '12, who has been for upwards of a year in France with the anti-aircraft artillery, has just been promoted to the rank of captain and adjutant in the Royal Flying Corps, according to word which has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Barnaby, St. John, N.B. He went overseas in the ranks of the First Canadian Division.

Lieut. Arthur A. Brown, Sci. '16, wounded at the capture of Hill 70, has been invalided home to Canada. He was a caller at the Union a few days ago.

Lieut. Hugh D. Chambers, Sci. '14, holds a commission in the Railway Construction Corps, a company of which he is raising at New Glasgow, N.S. On October 3 he was married to Miss Constance Wetmore, of Truro, N.S.

Capt. J. R. Goodall, Arts '09, Med. '01, who went across as Medical Officer of the 5th C.M.R., has been promoted to the rank of major while specially employed.

Capt. M. Krolik, Med. '13, now holds the rank of captain in the C.A.M.C., having been transferred from the R.A.M.C.

Capt. H. T. Lipplatt, Med. '04, is serving with the R.A.M.C. overseas. Temporary Major H. Molson, M.C.,

WEEK IN REVIEW.

On Monday last, Oct. 1st, McGill University entered upon its ninety-sixth session. Principal Sir Wm. Peterson, K.C.M.G., delivered the Inaugural Address Monday afternoon at 5.00 o'clock in the Royal Victoria College. Word received by the Governors of the University of the splendid bequest by the late Captain Percival Molson of seventy-five thousand dollars towards the cost of construction of the new Stadium. This magnificent bequest is quite characteristic of the donor, to whose generosity McGill owes in great part the construction of its new Stadium. This bequest now makes it possible for the students to take over the Stadium on the resumption of inter-collegiate activities practically free from debt. This beneficence on the part of the late Captain Molson is only another example of his liberality and another evidence of his undying love for his Alma Mater.

Captain Simpson's proposal, advancing a system of concentration, accepted by the University authorities. The idea is one of concentration, and will mean the completion of military training during the first term. Regulations regarding time of parades, attendance and leave were published in preparation for commencing training immediately.

The Freshmen in Arts, Law and Theology were entertained at a Reception held in Strathcona Hall on Thursday evening. Over one hundred and fifty first year men were on hand and to all appearances spent a very enjoyable evening. Dean Moyses and Dean Lee addressed the men in words of appropriate advice.

On Friday evening the Freshmen of Science and Medicine were similarly entertained. On this occasion Dean Adams and Acting Dean Blackader welcomed the newcomers to McGill.

Sci. '04, has been appointed Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General on the staff overseas.

Major A. G. Cameron, D.S.O., Law '10, has been appointed an Assistant Adjutant-General and promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Capt. Robert Bickerdike, Sci. '01, has been promoted to the rank of major. He went overseas with the Canadian Grenadier Guards, and has been wounded.

H. Clifford Irving, Arts '17, is entering upon studies in law in Vancouver, B.C.

Dr. William Frothingham Roach, Med. '12, of Montreal, has been admitted to the freedom and livery of the Feltmakers Company and of the City of London. The ceremony took place at the Guildhall, and in proposing him, Major Richard Rigg, the Upper Warden of the Company, spoke of Dr. Roach's special research work at McGill, Oxford, Dublin and London. "He has served as medical officer on the West African Medical Staff, and rendered distinguished service for public health and in fighting yellow fever at Para and Manaus, Brazil." Dr. Roach is now a member of the Pensions Medical Board, Lecturer on School Hygiene at King's College for Women (London University), and surgeon on the London Skin Hospital. Sir Louis A. Newton, Senior Sheriff, seconded the proposal, and in reply Dr. Roach spoke of the admiration which Montrealers had for the lofty patriotism and true Imperial spirit of the citizens of London. He especially eulogized the organization and administration of public health in London: "the envy and at the same time the ideal of civilization."

The marriage took place at the rectory of St. Mark's Church, Halifax, N.S., on September 26, of Dr. Lorne McCorsia Macintosh, Med. '04, of Hartland, N.B., and Miss Annie Drakeford Duke, Liverpool, England.

Miss Georgie Melvin, Arts '17, has entered Bryn Mawr College to take up post graduate studies. Miss Melvin has been awarded a scholarship at Bryn Mawr.

McGill graduates honored by the Montreal Presbyterian College with the honorary degree of D.D. at the jubilee of the institution, were the following: Rev. George Whillans, Arts '82, North Georgetown, Que.; Rev. Samuel Roudan, Arts '84, editor of L'Arriere, Montreal; Rev. F. H. Larkin, Arts '88, Seaford, Ont.; Rev. J. C. Robertson, Arts '96; Rev. Dr. E. I. Rexford, Arts '78.

The death occurred on June 30 at his residence, 53 Ballantyne avenue, Montreal West, after a short illness, of Dr. F. W. Kelley, Arts '71, who for thirty-six years was senior master at the Montreal High School. Dr. Kelley, who was born at Stewiacke, N.S., seventy-three years ago, was gold medalist in English literature and history at McGill. He was for one year principal of the Royal Arthur School, and then at the request of Sir William Dawson took up work at the Montreal High School. After his post-graduate course at Cornell, where he took his Ph.D., he was given the position of senior master at the Montreal High School in 1879, which position he held until his retirement in 1911. In 1893 he married Miss Jean Hart, who for some years was principal of the Girls' High School. She survives him.

The death occurred in Montreal on July 15 of George E. Bampton, K.C., Law '79. He was born in Plymouth, England, and held the position of provincial revenue attorney.

The marriage took place in the First Presbyterian Church, Montreal, on July 3rd, of Miss Marjorie Jean Hyslop, youngest daughter of the late M. R. Hyslop, St. John's, Que., and John Egbert McQuat, Agr. '16, now demonstrator in agriculture to Rural Schools in Quebec.

Miss Annie Gray, Arts '09, one of the few R. V. C. students who have been graduated with the degree of B.Sc. in Arts, has been appointed general secretary of the Y.W.C.A. at Ottawa. The social service appealed most strongly to Miss Gray after graduating in spite of many openings along scientific lines, and after spending a year as associate secretary in the Peterboro Y.W.C.A., she went to the Ottawa association four years ago as assistant secretary. Miss Gray has also taken a very active part in missionary work.

SOLILOQUY OF A FRESHMAN.

"To do or not to do!—That is the question. If I do, then I am undone. If I do not, I am undone just the same. If I try to do, and do not do, that is, if I am stopped from doing what I am going to do, then I am in a worse position than before. The truth is that I do not know what to do. Some man—I think he was a poet or something—said that they who do nothing gain nothing. But he wasn't a Freshman like me. If I take Mabel to the show to-night, I must take her to Bryson's afterwards. And if I take her to Bryson's, and the Sophs. come in, then I must crouch under a table like I did Tuesday night, when the second year men came in with the boys from our class. And if I stay in this rooming house to-night, and go to bed—as I should—then they will come and take me. If I only had a wife and a home like some boys, perhaps I'd be better off. Well, perhaps not. If I had a wife like Jiggs—Ah! this is a cruel world!—Hurray, I've got it! Monday is Thanksgiving Day, and I'll go home for the week-end. They'll be stung, if they come for me when I'm away. I should worry, any way."

"TRIP ACROSS," BY A GUNNER IN SIEGE BATTERY.

June 27th, 1917.—We have made six hundred miles to-day, getting along slow but sure. The Battery are pretty well split up on duties, some on police duty, some as signallers on the bridge, taking messages from the convoys, and the rest on guard at water-tight doors and look-outs. No fatigue duties so far. We sighted the first ship we have passed to-day.

June 28th, 1917.—We are now about nine hundred miles out, and it is beginning to get pretty rough. Some of the bunch are hanging over the side of the boat, but my turn has not come yet. This police duty is some job, fighting all the time; believe me, I'll be some scrapper when I get through. Last night there was a very heavy fog, with the horn tooting every few minutes. That horn is the most dreary sound I have ever heard. Our men are making good on the police work. We were lined up for boat drill to-day, while the Captain of the ship and his officers were on their rounds. One of the staff said, "They are a fine looking bunch of men," and the Captain's reply was, "Yes, and they are playing the game, too." Not bad for a start, is it?

June 29th, 1917.—Well, we are half way across now, and if the second half is as good as the first, we will have no kick. It has been raining and very foggy all day, so we are making good use of our rain coats. They are great for the wind. News is starting to get scarce.

June 30th, 1917.—Have just put in a couple of hours on deck playing cards. It started in this morning very badly, and gave all promise of a dirty day, but cleared up after lunch. It is not quite as rough, but quite a few of the boys are still hanging over the sides. Had a little excitement this morning. One of the men, from a battalion on board, accidentally shot himself in the leg while cleaning a revolver. We "the police," are having quite a time with the gamblers on board, and make occasional raids to keep them moving.

July 1st, 1917.—A holiday to-day, so we had a special dinner, including chicken, plum pudding, etc. We are now in the danger zone, and expect to pick up our convoy of submarine destroyers either to-night or to-morrow morning. I think we are going to disembark at L.

July 2nd, 1917.—Well, I guess we will be in England very shortly now. At 7.45 a.m. we had some very welcome visitors, five torpedo-boat destroyers pulled up to us, going about forty miles an hour. I think it was the finest sight I have ever laid my eyes on. We expect to see land to-morrow, and believe me, it will be a welcome sight. The sea is all right for a while, but gets terribly monotonous. I have never seen a happier crowd than our bunch; the younger ones don't have a chance to get homesick. You would have had a good laugh if you could have seen me an hour ago washing clothes. When I get back home I'll be getting up early in the morning to make my bed and wash my clothes. No more use for the Chink.

July 3rd, 1917.—Well, we shall be at E. to-morrow morning, and believe me, we have some work ahead of us packing up, so have to leave the conclusion of this epistle till after we are landed and in camp.

YALE HAS GUNS.

New Haven, Conn.—At Yale University was placed the newly arrived battery of 75 millimeter guns, caissons and equipments by the French Government for use of the Yale artillery companies. The guns have been in service on the Western front, and show much camouflage. They are the first guns of this type to arrive in this country, and are for instruction purposes. Capt. Dupont, a French artillery officer, is here to assist Captain Overton and his Canadian officers to organize the course of instruction. The guns were sent to the University on the recommendation of M. Andre Tardour, the French High Commissioner, and the members of the French military commission in this country

"The Eye, Ear and Nose" of a Suit

Doctors who specialize in their practice become expert in their particular specialty, and men and women seek them out when they are afflicted with the malady to which the doctor has devoted his study and experience.

Thirty tailors contribute to the making of each individual suit; and each tailor is a specialist, having become expert in the making of his specialty.

One man makes collars.

Another makes pockets.

A third makes linings.

A fourth fits the lining.

A fifth shapes the shoulders.

A sixth sews in sleeves—so on.

And thus the thirty specialists produce a Semi-ready Coat, and the Chief Examiner pronounces it good before there is sewn in the pocket the "Shield that Shields."
